THE ROUTE

Where the boat dives

The route depends on the weather, and the sample itineraries and sites are shown for illustration only. The exact route and dive sites are at the captain's discretion and can change with regulations, weather and logistics.

VAAVU, MEEMU, THAA AND LAAMU

Mysterious channels, dramatic vertical walls and expansive sandbanks sculpted by the currents, with coral gardens between the channels.

HUVADHOO AND FUVAHMULAH

The deep south is the place for the big animals: tiger sharks, great hammerheads, silvertip sharks, thresher sharks, whale sharks, oceanic manta rays, spinner sharks, grey reef, whitetip and blacktip sharks, and playful dolphins.

THE DIVING

Diving and snorkelling

DIVING EXPERIENCE

Divers need at least 60 logged dives, Advanced Open Water or an equivalent certification, and Nitrox certification. Divers who have not dived for more than two years, or who are unsure of their skills, should take a refresher course before the trip, and less experienced divers may be kept from the more challenging sites.

HOW THE DIVING WORKS

All dives are guided by experienced dive professionals, and all the diving is on Nitrox. Dives are made in self-reliant buddy teams with experienced guides, and divers must be able to make independent ascents, using a surface marker buoy when necessary. Briefings are in English, German, Italian and Spanish.

Dives start from the dhoni, the dive boat. There is no diving on the arrival or departure days, and divers make two or three dives a day, usually three, with a night dive on every trip. The last dive is on the day before disembarkation, and divers should wait 24 hours after the last dive before flying.

DIVING IN THE DEEP SOUTH

The deep south is for experienced divers. Divers need at least 60 dives, with solid experience in strong currents. At Fuvahmulah the wetsuit should be black, and thin black gloves are asked for, and bright colours are best avoided. Less experienced divers may not be allowed on the more challenging sites, especially at Fuvahmulah.

DIVING EQUIPMENT

Each diver needs a mask, BCD and fins, a surface marker buoy, a signal whistle, a reef hook, a Nitrox-capable dive computer, a regulator with an alternate air source, a cutting tool and a torch, and all of it is used on every dive. A hood, snorkel, boots and compass are recommended. Spare and rental equipment is available on board, but wetsuits cannot be rented. The minimum age for divers is 18. Because tiger sharks and bull sharks can come very close, black equipment, black fins, a black hood and a black full-length wetsuit are recommended, and bright colours are best avoided.

SNORKELLING

The boat welcomes snorkellers.

ON BOARD

Food, service and the team

CUISINE

German and Maldivian chefs bake fresh bread every morning, and the menu mixes Asian dishes with international and Western food, with vegetarian and vegan options. Beer and wine are available.

SERVICE AND THE TEAM

A tour guide, dive guides and a dive crew look after the guests, and the multilingual crew, local and international, speaks English, German and Italian and is trained in first aid. Daily room cleaning, towels and toiletries are included, and the welcome on board includes a drink and a lime-scented towel. Wi-Fi is available on board.

DECK PLAN

The upper deck has an outdoor lounge for relaxing between dives, and the partly covered sun deck has sun loungers. Inside there is a saloon and a dining room, and the boat also has a leisure deck, an observation deck and outside showers.
