Raja Ampat National Park

The Raja Ampat archipelago consists of some 600 Islands and islets that straddle the equator in the area off the “Birds Head”. The name Raja Ampat literally means ‘the Four Kings’ and dates back to the time that the islands were ruled from the North Moluccan sultanates of Ternate. At that time the four larger islands in Waigeo, Salawati, Batanta and Misool used to have an independent king. Most of the islands have rugged and steep coastlines and are covered with virgin rainforest. The larger islands are lightly populated, but most others are still uninhabited by humans.

Raja Ampat is also famous as for his underwater world: marine biologists have concluded that this area is home to seventy percent of the known coral species on the planet. Many fish, corals and crustaceans that live in these waters are found nowhere else on earth. Welcome aboard for a real voyage of a lifetime.
