

ECOPRO SEASCAPE

Deep South Gan to Kooddoo

Gan to Kooddoo | Addu, Fuvahmulah and Gaafu Alifu

Channels and pelagic life define the Deep South, and this trip starts where the mantas are.

In Addu Atoll, a cleaning station sits in a channel with strong currents, a tanker torpedoed in 1944 lies on the seabed, and oceanic mantas are often seen on the outer reef.

Then comes Fuvahmulah, where sometimes 15 or more tiger sharks come up from the drop-off, and the plateaus bring pelagics, hammerheads and whale sharks, or intact coral.

It ends in Huvadhoo, with a channel full of grey reef sharks and a long coral garden of dozens of hard coral species and turtles.
